WELCOME TO THE NEW ERA OF PUBLICLY ACCESSIBLE LOCATIONS (PALS) AND EVENT SECURITY

Martyn's Law—also known as the Terrorism (Protection of Premises) Act 2025—ushers in a transformative approach to public safety across the United Kingdom.

Inspired by the tragic Manchester Arena attack and named in memory of Martyn Hett, this legislation compels all venues with a capacity of 200 or more to implement robust counter-terrorism measures, including risk assessments, emergency planning, staff training, and effective incident response systems.

Meeting the demands of Martyn's Law can feel daunting. That's why organisations are turning to digital platforms that streamline compliance and provide peace of mind. Enter the powerful partnership of Quidvis and Callmy Alert—a fully integrated solution designed to transform compliance from a tick-box exercise into a culture of proactive safety.

PROVEN IN ACTION: LONDON MUSEUM LEADS BY EXAMPLE

When one of London's foremost museums adopted Callmy Alert, it signalled a firm commitment to public safety and Martyn's Law compliance. In preparation for its legal requirements, the museum has adopted Callmy Alert to deliver rapid lockdown messages and incident support, protecting both staff and visitors.

"The safety of our visitors and staff is paramount," stated the museum's Head of Security. "Callmy Alert ensures we meet Martyn's Law requirements and are prepared to manage emergencies efficiently." The platform enables real-time, geo-fenced alerts, two-way messaging, and instant updates, supporting robust security and contingency planning.

Tony Watson, CEO of Callmy Ltd, said, "Partnering with this London museum demonstrates their dedication to public safety and serves as a model for other venues addressing Martyn's Law." The museum's collaboration with security experts and ongoing alignment with government guidance marks a significant step in securing its premises and providing reassurance for all visitors.
